

the last space without function

a space without a function is an extremely delicate artifact.

one glimpse into a space already places it in a human relationship and therefore imposes a function on it.

imagine a world in which everything has been explored and there is only one functionless space left.

for its preservation it needs to be sealed.

no human being must ever see it.

no picture must ever be taken.

no plan must ever be drawn.

ground plan

section

exterior view

interior view