

Word „architecture” for people often associates with great buildings they have seen. And great buildings inspire human beings. Today, when there are more people than ever and they’re more capable than ever, it’s important to create balance between man and the environment. Often this issue is understood as some restrictions for keeping man away from nature or limiting architecture, its connection to natural surroundings. A house with a tree attempts to define a new way of living, where one is aware of the situation, because he is connected to it. A space, where a man grows together with a tree. It’s a concept of thinking, not carrying an architectural sacrifices.
