

GENESIS

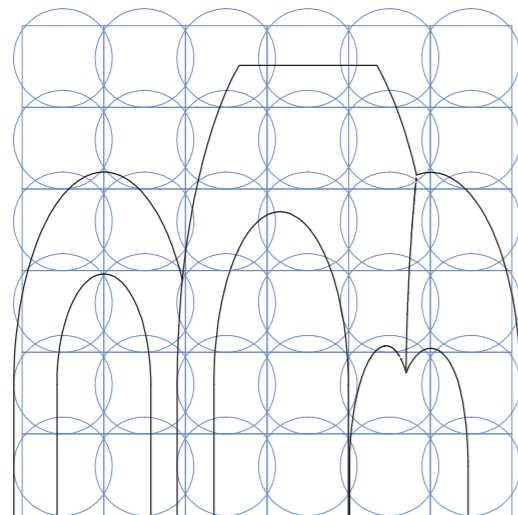

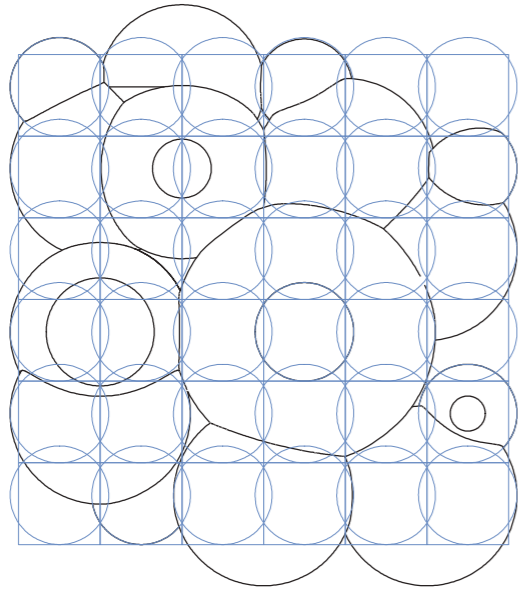

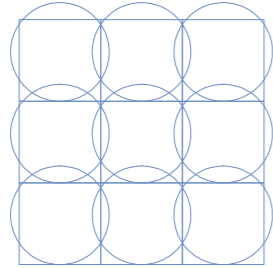

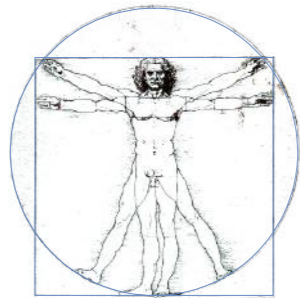

Architecture creating borders. Limits defining room around human.

As well as the man, architecture was born in the moment, when grew up from the ground and resisted the earth's gravity. It was the moment when the vertical wall cut the horizontal space and separated the finite room from infinite nature. From two sticks supporting each other, to triangular tents, architrave system or beam structures, construction found its most precise form in the vault - the load-bearing element that is well known through civilisation and evoke the feeling of architecture in people from different countries and generations.

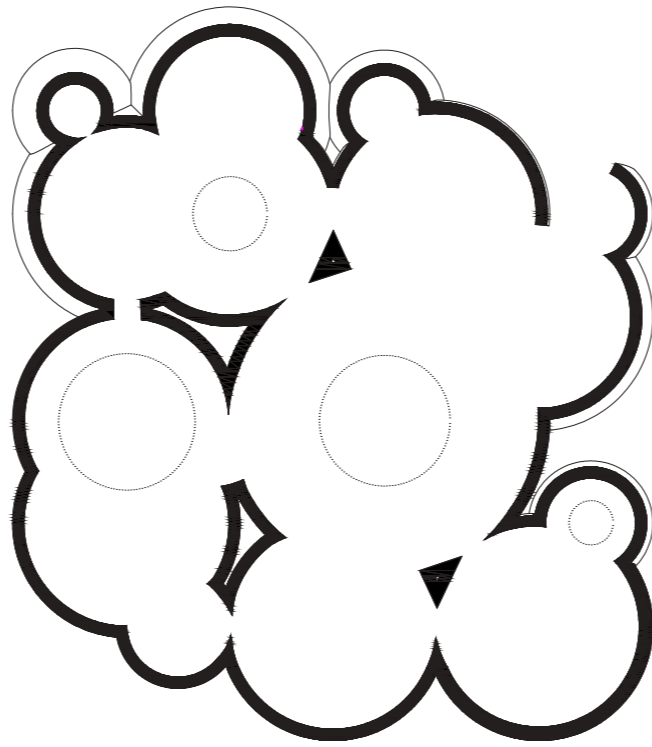

We took this element, form it according to human scale and multiply it into the structure, which provide visitor the shelter from the outside world, as well as different experience of space and its special qualities. Experience of the hight and the scale, experience of the ground and sky.

Different heights, different experiences, different space, different feeling.

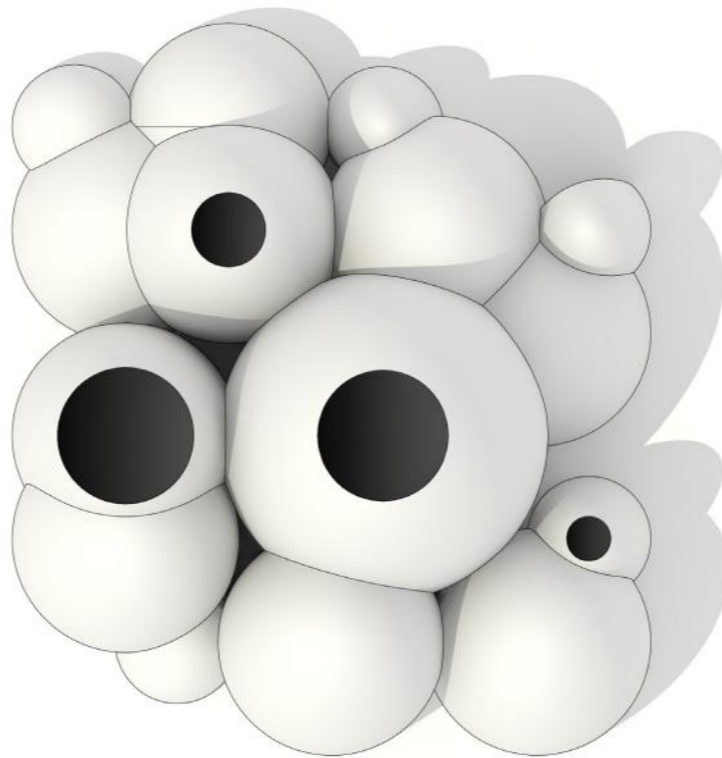

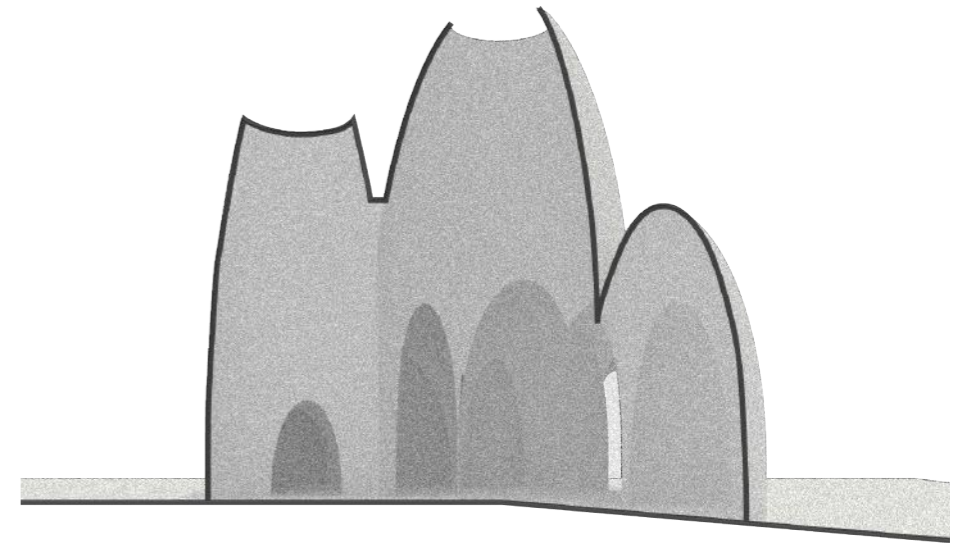

genesis diagram

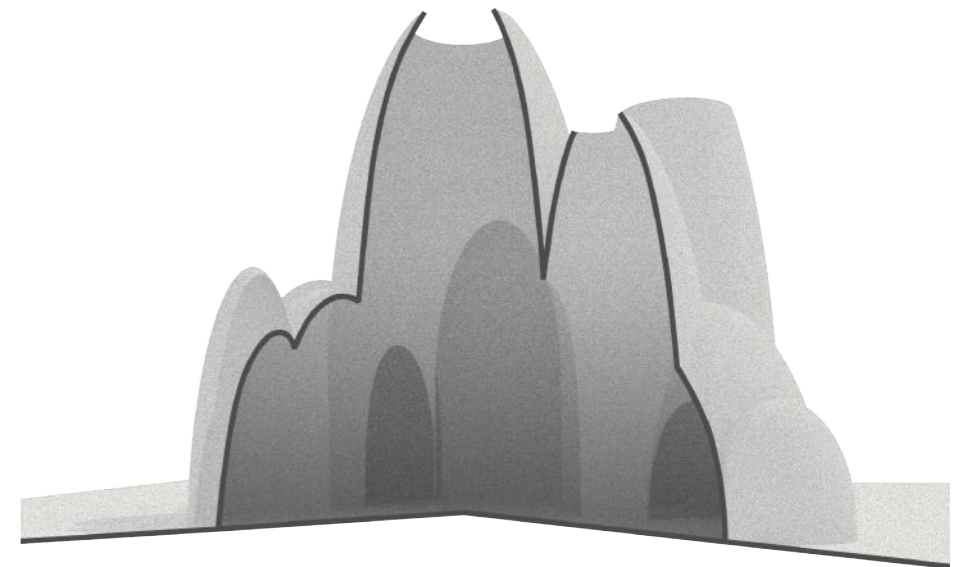

plan

top view

perspective section view

perspective section view